"The world makes way for the man who knows where he is going."
"It is never too late to be what you might have been."
"Your work is to discover your work and then, with all your heart, to give yourself to it."
"To be yourself in a world that is constantly trying to make you something else is the greatest accomplishment."
"You are never too old to set another goal or to dream a new dream."
"In three words I can sum up all that I have learned about life: it goes on."
"You only live once, but if you do it right, once is enough."
"No one can make you feel inferior without your consent."
"The best way to prepare for life is to begin to live."

YOUR FRIENDLY BIG TIMBERWOLF, TIMMY!

MAKE YOUR LAST YEAR WORTHWHILE!

Grade 8, it all started, with everyone trying to be together and preparing one another for the amazing adventure they were about to embark on. Boys, well they didn't really matter. Girls, guys could care less. Clothes, you could practically wear your pajamas everyday and no one would say anything. Nobody cared who talked to whom; the only thing that really mattered was how amazing the new "high school" experience was. As the years pass so do friendships and the whole idea that boys and girls can just be friends. High fives became holding hands, wearing the same shirt two days in a row becomes "disgusting" and the high school experience you thought you could have everyday and never get tired of, changes. You stand in the halls and watch the same people pass you everyday, we go to class and learn things you think you'll never even use again. The food in the cafeteria just doesn't taste nearly as good as it use to. The giggling and talking about the student standing next to you in the hall, turns into a fight with one of those friends we said would be forever. The whole point of this is that people make high school so much harder then it needs to be. We start to care and analyse situations that shouldn't have even started in the first place. When schools over and done with were going to look back and realize how stupid we were for doing all of those things; yelling at that kid that liked your ex, or realizing how we really did need to learn all that math we brushed off to the side.

The drama, that's self-inflicted. We all make situations worse then they need to be calling someone fat isn't going to make you skinnier, and calling someone stupid wont make you smarter. This experience is the time that we need to live it up and take every second we have and make it the best. Stop with the drama because it doesn't do anything for anyone. So live your life for you, and not for other people because in the end your going to be the last one standing. Love the people you have in your life and leave those out who don't want to be a part of it. The world does not care who you were in high school.

So here's to all the grads of 2010 & future grads, lets make this a year to remember and one to look back on with no regrets. It's not worth all the drama and friendships being lost when in the end, none of it really matters. Lets get that grade 8 high school experiences back when we all thought, "this is going to be the time of our lives"
